

Sixty-four governments from throughout the world have consular offices and/or trade representation in Atlanta, Macon, and/or Savannah. Consular offices are established by foreign governments 1) to officially develop economic, commercial, scientific and cultural relations between the country they represent and the area in which they serve, and 2) to safeguard the interests of the sending country and its citizens traveling or residing in their consular district. Traditionally these duties include issuing and renewing passports and other official documents, helping travelers in distress, signing death certificates, legalizing or delivering official documents, and assisting travelers who have trouble with local law enforcement or immigration authorities.

There are sixty-four countries represented in Georgia, with twenty-two career consulates, forty-five honorary consular offices and over one dozen trade and investment agencies. Career officials are members of their country's foreign (diplomatic) or commercial service while honorary officials are local residents appointed by foreign governments to perform consular duties. The Dean of the Consular Corps, currently Dr. Lutz Görgens, Consul General of the Federal Republic of Germany, is traditionally the career official with the longest tenure.

More than a dozen foreign governments have operations in Atlanta to promote trade between their countries/regions and Georgia and the Southeast U.S. In some cases the trade promotion work is handled from within the countries' consular offices (sometimes by the consular head of post), while others maintain independent trade offices.
